Fujikawaguchiko Game Meat

Fujikawaguchiko Town is actively promoting the local production and consumption of game meat. To make use of deer captured within the town, a meat processing facility was established in 2009. Under strict quality control, "delicious and safe venison" is sold to restaurants both within and outside the town.

Each restaurant offers a variety of dishes using venison. You can enjoy game meat dishes at the following locations: No.19 "Restaurant New Akaike," No.20 "Matsukaze" (page 5), No.40 "Various Dishes Kotobuki," and No.41 "Honjin Tsukasa" (page 10). Be sure to visit and experience these dishes!

oto is a traditional local dish representative of Yamanashi in which plain noodles are cooked with miso-based soup and seasonal vegetables. It is a dish we highly recommend. And don't forget to try "Yoshida-noudon" in the Fuji Five Lakes area, including Fujikawaguchiko Town. It features noodles that are strong in texture and miso or soy sauce-based soup. It is particularly popular among people in this town.

Tradition of eating horsemeat

The Fuji Five Lakes area, including Fujikawaguchiko Town, has a long tradition of eating horse meat. Speaking of horses, it is held at Fuji-Omuro-Sengen-jinja Shrine in Katsuyama district every April "Kai no Katsuyama Yabusame Matsuri". It is said that it was dedicated in the riding ground of Mount Fuji in old days. This area is the base of Mt. Fuji worship. Horses were very useful for climbers to carry bags.

Pickallo

Even now, the townspeople love horse meat. In butcher shops, Basashi(horse meat sashimi)is lined up, and eaten as a little luxury at celebrations or parties. There are also many restaurants that serves local gourmet called "Yoshida no udon" noodle(Introduced on page 11.). These noodles are often topped with salty-sweet stewed horse meat. Horse tripe are also very popular among the townspeople. When you order "Motsuni(Japanese tripe stew)" at japanese pubs, they often serve

Horsemeat has less smell and is easy to eat, and is low in calories and high in protein. It is also rich in iron. If you visit Fujikawaguchiko town, please try it

Flour food culture in Fujikawaguchiko Town

"Yoshida-no-udon" which has its roots in Fujiyoshida city next to this town

Hoto is a popular regional dish. It is a hot pot dish stewing flat Udon noodles and vegetables in miso soup

In Fujikawaguchiko town, upland farming has developed rather than rice cultivation. For this reason, flour foods such as "Hoto" and udon noodle have long taken root.

In the past, udon was a sacred thing to eat at ceremonial occasions. In the Showa era, in the Fujiyoshida city where the textile industry developed, people can enjoy a bowl of udon as a convenient lunch during work. These are the roots of today's "Yoshida-no-udon". After the war, many udon shops opened in the Fuji Five Lakes area.

On the other hand, hoto was eaten as daily dinner in the past. Add noodles and vegetables such as root vegetables, potatoes, mushrooms to the soup stock, and add the taste with miso. People shared it with their family and cultivate vitality for

Even nowadays, udon is loved by people as a lunch to eat between work and hoto is a home taste that everyone can enjoy.

I f you are a meat lover, we suggest you visit the local yakiniku restaurant. You can enjoy delicious beef and chicken. In addition, there are restaurants that serve Japanese cuisine made from beef or pork innards referred to as hormone. Also, there are Chinese restaurants famous for tasty Chinese cuisine and ramen and Indian restaurants that serve a selection of spicy curries.

Fuji-kawaguchiko Town is home to numerous breweries and distilleries. This town is blessed with the crystal-clear air and abundant nature unique to the foothills of Mount Fuji. The snow that accumulates on the sacred peak of Mt. Fuji slowly seeps into the ground over time, bringing underground water and spring water to us. Here, we introduce a variety of exquisite Japanese sake, whiskey, and wine crafted with carefully selected ingredients and exceptional craftsmanship.

ragrant craft beer "Fujizakura Heights Beer"

In 1997, Fujizakura Heights beer was made at a brewery in a forest at an altitude of 1000 meters. It is brewed using selected ingredients and high quality water from Mt. Fuii, with German technology. This beer has been highly evaluated in many beer contests.
